

JAROSŁAW SOKOŁOWSKI Poland

It is said, that the three most beautiful things in the world are: a woman in a dance, a frigate under full sail and a horse in a gallop. It should come as no surprise that while exploring the secrets of photography I have decided to choose from the most beautiful things – there's always a greater chance for success, than taking photographs of something else. However, since I live in the mountains, not very high, but still in the mountains, where the frigates are not easy to find, especially under the sail and my wife probably wouldn't appreciate the search for dancing women – I chose the horses. Another saying states that whoever mounts a horse - mounts the wind. Believe me, now I'm sure that whoever takes a picture of a horse in a gallop – tames the element. For a moment, for a fraction of a second. Enjoy and thank you for taking the moment to view my photographs. It's equally important to me. jarsok@poczta.fm
