

Georgian ARABIANS

Georgian Arabians sits in the West Country of England, where the rolling hills and wilds of Exmoor National Park, are home to the romantic tales of Lorna Doone.

The stud's facilities include a large indoor arena, exerciser for five horses and stabling for fifty.

The farm is surrounded by acres of green pastures and the herd comprises of sixty Arabian Purebreds – most of whom are home bred.

Owner, Susan George, known for an illustrious film career, has been a horse enthusiast practically all her life.

Her desire to own and breed the Arabian horse has evolved through dedication and commitment and 17 years ago, she and her late husband, fellow actor, Simon MacCorkindale, began the work to realise a dream that is now Georgian Arabians, a world Class recognised establishment.

In 2001 they leased enigmatic Triple Crown Champion Stallion, Essteem, who resided at the stud for 2 year and half. In his time there, he had a profound influence on the breeding programme and became its cornerstone. Many years later, Susan first set eyes on a (then) virtually unknown young stallion at the World Championship – WH Justice. She decided he had all the attributes needed for her growing breeding programme and would be the perfect sire with his type, elegance and refinement, to cross with her Essteem mares and so, to make his mark at Georgian Arabians. WH Justice has for the stud become the turning point to the future.
